RURAL ALABAMA PREVENTION CENTER 2016-2019 Partnership Network Report

The rise of chronic disease, often related to lifestyle, is a growing problem that has many systemic effects. These effects often manifest as burdens on individuals, families, and businesses. This is especially true in rural Alabama where individuals and families face barriers to health care because of what they must spend on housing, food, clothing, and other things that leaves them with fewer dollars to keep their families healthy. This explains why chronic diseases continue to impact the quality of life, mortality, healthcare access and costs for rural healthcare systems and rural residents.

For the past three years, Rural Alabama Prevention, Inc. (RAPC), along with its consortium partners, have been working together to improve the health of residents of Southwest Alabama, especially those people most affected by chronic disease. We have seen firsthand people who do not receive routine and preventive health care usually present diseases that are much farther advanced; thereby, making chronic care more "urgent", especially in rural Alabama where residents are less likely to have access to quality health care. Recognizing the need to further address the prevalence of chronic disease in rural Alabama, RAPC secured funding from the Department of Health and Human Services, Health Resources and Service Administration (HRSA), and Delta Network Development Grant Program for the establishment of the South West Alabama Health Improvement Initiative (SWAHII).

The overarching goal of SWAHII is to promote and support healthy lifestyles throughout Alabama's Delta counties through the implementation of programs geared toward the prevention and care management of chronic diseases. Since the inception of SWAHII, partnering organizations have been implementing evidence-based curriculums designed to provide step-by-step strategies that address the root causes of chronic disease in multiple faith and healthcare settings. These strategic approaches include but are not limited to integrating: 1) care coordinators in a hospital setting for patients identified in the emergency with congestive heart failure (CHF), diabetes, COPD, and/or hypertension, and 2) wellness curricula in churches that focus on healthy eating and physical activity.

SOME KEY ACHIEVEMENTS:

- Served 18 Alabama counties:
Barbour, Bullock, Butler, Choctaw, Clarke, Conecuh, Dallas, Escambia, Greene, Hale, Macon, Marengo, Monroe, Perry, Pickens, Sumter, Washington, and Wilcox.
- Body and Soul Wellness curriculum implemented
- Power-To-Prevent Program implemented
- 108 Churches served
- 2,100 Churchgoers participated in activities geared toward increasing knowledge on the impact of chronic diseases
- Churches developed policies that eliminated serving unhealthy foods and sugary drinks during events and the prohibition of smoking on church property
- Chronic Care Management Program implemented in churches, hospitals, and healthcare facilities
- Hospitals provided care coordination services to over 270 patients
- Referrals for mental health evaluation and treatment provided
- Referrals for home health services for patients meeting the criteria
- As an appreciation for churches that have successfully implemented the Body and Soul Wellness Program, they are invited to attend the Annual Wellness Conference where they are recognized with certificates of appreciation.
- During this conference, church leaders and pastors share insight and learn new strategies to help their parishioners lead a healthy lifestyle
- Attendees hear testimonies from churches on how vital the Body and Soul Wellness program has been in the promotion of health living among their members

As we continue our efforts, we encourage everyone to get involved in your health, the health of your family, and the health of your community. With all of us working together, we can ensure a healthier Alabama.
